

Mark Sherman

The Associated Press

Mark Sherman has covered the Supreme Court for The Associated Press since 2006, a period that has included blockbuster decisions on health care and same-sex marriage and big changes in the court's membership. He has previously written about the Justice Department, health care and national politics in more than 25 years as a reporter based in Washington and Atlanta. Earlier in his professional life, Sherman worked for the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, briefly was a Foreign Service officer and served as a copyboy at the New York Times.

Sherman is a native of Brooklyn, NY, a graduate of Princeton University and a resident of Washington, DC, where he lives just a few blocks from the court with his wife and children.
