More going to theme parks
California Adventure saw an increase in visitors this year to 750,000, with attendance last year reaching 720,000 people. Intermountain’s annual report is coming up next week, and it will be interesting to see how they compare.

California Adventure’s $14.7 million the following year, followed by a dip to $11.7 million the following year, and finally a $9.7 million loss the following year. The park is now the sixth-most popular theme park in North America.

America. California Adventure’s annual report is coming up next week, and it will be interesting to see how they compare.

We are experiencing a surge in attendance this year, said a spokeswoman for the park.

The park was initially popular 12 years ago when it opened, but its attendance has been declining since then.

Disney officials declined to comment on the report.
