STATE AND REGIONAL

- Convenor Task Force 2.0: Race and Washington's Criminal Justice System. June 2020-August 2022. Primary convenor and leader of an ad hoc task force formed in the wake of protests following the murder of George Floyd. Formally co-chaired by the deans of Washington's three law schools, the task force brought together over 50 organizations from around the state and included participation from judges, prosecutors, defenders, researchers, and leaders of community-based organizations to update the work of a previous task force on race and Washington's criminal justice system.
- Member Council on Public Defense. Washington State Bar Association. October 2015-September 2017.
- Co-chair Task Force on Race and the Criminal Justice System. November 2010-June 2012 (with the Honorable Steven C. González). With then Judge, now Chief Justice, Steven A. González, initiated ad hoc task force as a response to remarks by a then-sitting Washington Supreme Court justice who stated in a quoted news story that blacks were disproportionately imprisoned because they committed more crimes. Brought together over 40 organizations from around the state and included participation from judges, prosecutors, defenders, legislators, law enforcement, researchers, and leaders of community-based organizations to examine the issue, which led to a report and historic presentation to the Washington Supreme Court that included recommendations for criminal justice reform.
